Between 20 and 30 December 1952, three Chinese Communist mechanized divisions moved from Chiamussu (N 46-49, E 130-21), where they had been in training since 1951, to the area south of Mukden.¹ These divisions, organized in Manchuria from veterans of the Northeast People's Liberation Army, were all Soviet-trained and equipped with Soviet tanks and self-propelled guns.
2. These divisions were part of the recently organized Chinese Communist 5 Field Army and were to join other units of the 5 Field Army at Mukden.
3. This troop movement was the first movement of army size from north Manchuria since January 1951.
